Analytical Guidelines & Methodology Notes

- Metric Choice:
Use Average Discount % rather than the raw Sum of Discount % when comparing products.
- Popularity Metric:
Treat Total Reviews / Rating Count as customer engagement or popularity metrics according to dataset definitions.
- Correlation Warning:
Avoid treating the relationship between discount and rating as proof of direct causation.
- Data Discretization:
Grouping ratings and discount bands into discrete ranges simplifies the analysis of continuous numerical variables.

Executive Summary & Key Insights

- Popularity ≠ Satisfaction: High popularity (measured by total review count) does not always translate to high customer satisfaction. Some products gather massive review volume despite maintaining lower average ratings, while others hold top ratings with fewer reviews.
- Rating Breakdown: Customer sentiment is predominantly positive, with 78.4% of reviews falling into the 4 to 5 rating group, followed by 12.6% in 3 to 4, 6.3% in 2 to 3, and only 2.7% in 1 to 2.
- Category Performance: Office Products (4.30), Toys & Games (4.30), and Home Improvement (4.28) achieve the highest ratings. Car & Motorbike scores the lowest at 3.82.
- Discount Band Distribution: The highest volume of products (350K) sits in the lowest discount band (0-10%), with product count steadily dropping as discount depth increases (only 40K products in the 50%+ band).
